Mulberry Street Crossing Problem

With the increase in automotive traffic over the River road, improvement of which has relieved no small part of the heavy travel over Pennsylvania avenue, and the mounting number of freight trains operating over the Cleveland division, the Mulberry street crossing problem has become acute.

Attention to the situation, which has been discussed In city council, was directed during the rain storm Thursday, when, according to East End reports, approximate-Jy 100 motor cars were held on either side of the railroad for more than 30 minutes waiting for two freight trains to clear. And at virtually the same time the Virginia avenue and Belleek street crossings, too, were

And not infrequently, long freights are stopped at the Mulberry intersection by the block signal system between the latter crossing and Virginia avenue. Under ordinary conditions, it requires from ten to fifteen minntes for a heavy freight to clearing a crossing.

The seriousness of the problem is seen in the fact that traffic is usually tied up at the same time at all crossings except Klondike, where an overhead has been constructed. And the latter improvement does not permit an outlet to downtown in the event that traffic is on the south side of the railroad.

East End business interests and other taxpayers have prged that attention should be given this situation. They, like many persons in the downtown zone who have suggested action to relieve congestion at the Broadway action on the latter proposal seems improbable. However, city officials and the railroad company should act to provide relief in some form. The law prohibits the blockading of crossings for indefinite periods.

Divorce and Gold Digging

Superior Judge William N. Gemmill, of Chicago, holds that the very common practice of women drawing alimony from their first husbands after their remarriage to other men is highly immoral, and he has expressed

The combination of eloquence and enthusiasm, energy and courage, discipline and ruthlessness, is all part of the hope that the matter be carried to the highest judicial authority for a ruling.

The issue came before Judge Gemmill, last week, when a husband asked that he be relieved from paying the woman who had divorced him $25 a week alimony, stating that he had remarried and found the payment of $1,300 a year alimony a serious draft on his income.

upon the payment of her financial "pound of flesh."

"I can not understand how you can expect your first liely denounced as little short of criminal, husband, with whom you refused to live and whom you divorced, to continue to support you," Judge Gemmill said. "And I can not understand why you will take his money. How can you and your present husband live happily with the knowledge that you owe at least a portion of your maintenance to your first husband?"

The woman refused to be moved by the court's remarks, and her attorney intimated that he would carry the matter up in the event of an unfavorable decision.

"Excellent," came back the jjudge. "The question is he granted the appeal.

There are many cases in which alimony is a matter of right and justice, but it can not be in such cases as herein cited. Such gold-digging is impossible to selfrespecting women.

Golf Popularity

In concurrence with the principles of a democratic people who refuse to allow any activity to become or remain insular, the golf domain has widened to include everyone from the grade school student, who hardly measures the length of a club, to the millionaire who plays to prolong life.

Strangely enough, golf has been associated with pudgy business men and middle-aged persons. The N. H. sleek professional, the national champions and the younger men were more or less of a separate classification. But, it has spread down through the age classes until high school tournaments are now a recognized ac-

A Canton high school is giving official recognition to golf and tennis this spring as regular activities. They are supported in association with baseball and track. The high school spring sport card offers something for everyone who has the ambition to try.

Another evolutionary process in the game of golf has been the increasing facilities for play. It was not so many years ago that a golf course along the roadside was something to be stared at and the happy-looking people chasing a small white ball were regarded as unusual. Golf courses now are as common as meadows used to be and everyone knows something about the game. Women refused to be shut out from anything that they might like and become enthusiasts, college students took it up, caddy's tournaments were organized and now it is as widely known and as popular as baseball and on; ed by more people than indulge in any other sport except back seat driving.

Future champions will arise from the ranks of the young amateurs who become proficient. Their muscula: reactions are not as fixed as those of a man in his 30's or even his 20's. They attain the rhythm of a natural swing without the caustic advice of a professional; they are so interested in the game that the movements come naturally. Their reactions will become habits and enable them to play a more consistent game than the artificial player who is conscious of his movement. It has been proven in every other sport that early training makes better finished products than intensive training after the period of formative growth, and it is true in golf. Scholastic competition will be sure make champions, and they will not be champions for money.

HASKIN DAILY LETTER

-- By Frederick J. Haskin

WASHINGTON, D.C., May 4.—Three years ago General Charles P. Summerall, chief of staff of the United tates army, was hastily recalled by President Coolidge from an inspection trip through the west. The ranking MEMBER American Newspaper Publishers' Association officer of the army was called to Washington immediately and without explanation. No more urgent or mysters terious order could have been issued had the nation been in danger of invasion No public explanation of any national emergency was given General Summerall had made a speech about the condition of the buildings at army camps and forts in various parts of the country, declaring that the neglect in upkeep and replacement of these building was little short of criminal. After he was sent for by President Coolidge he did not make any more speeches on this subject.

Last winter congress appropriated a little more than thirteen million dollars for new building construction at army camps and forts. General Summerall is still chief of staff, and under his direction the bids are soon to be called for on seventy army building projects, for which plans have been drawn and money made available by congress, starting the first of next July.

Three years ago it was generally assumed that the president of the United States, in his capacity as commander-in-chief of the army, had advised his chief of staff to keep still about the need of spending millions for army post construction Some observers concluded this was in line with a national program of economy Whatever was said to him, Summerall apparently kept still. Nevertheless today General Summerall has for the army by far the largest peace-time appropriation for construction in its history. That he has it, and is about to make much needed use of it, is typical of Gen. Sum-merall's record. He is known as a result getter.

During the interval since he was presumably reprimanded by the president for talking too much, Gen Summerall has seen the post of chief of staff, which he holds, allocated a new rank. Its incumbent now ranks as a full general. Hitherto the rank of major-general only adorned that position. This was also by act of congress, an act which was passed shortly after Mr. Hoover became president

Many are the stories about the result-getting abilities of Summerall which are related in army circles. Among his accomplishments is that of being a very eloquent public speaker, something not altogether common among military men. He is in constant demand at banquets and public gatherings, and accepts a good many invitations where his appearance and remarks may be helpful to the national defense. Another of his happy faculties is ability to get along well with statesmen of civilhabit in thought. He is an extremely successful officer in his peace-time contracts, and he was one of the most successful in war-time operations.

When General Pershing reorganized the American expeditionary forces in the fall of 1918, and in the very midst of the great and crucial Meuse-Argonne offensive, he promoted Summerall from command of the frist division to command of the fifth corps. The fifth corps was placed in line opposite the central heights running back of Romagne and Cunel, the strong point of the main German line of defense, which Pershing's forces had been hamering at, without avail, for some weeks crossing, have recommended an overhead crossing. Early Urgent orders had come from Marshal Foch to press the advance at all costs. The whole battle plan, from the North Sea to the Alps, hinged on this American operation. Those heights, so vigorously defended and solidly fortified, must be taken.

Summerall's fifth corps took them in a three-day battle, October 14-16, 1918. It was a bloody, cruel, smashing task. Summerall acquired a reputation for ruthlessness by the way he hurled his divisions against those defenses. When any division, brigade, or regiment showed signs of weakening, Summerall was "on its neck." Officers were replaced on an instant's notice, and allowed to explain later.

Now at thirty-three separate camps, forts, and aviation fields, the hammers are about to start ringing, as seventy new buildings are started, to cost altogether about $13,358,000. The first contract has been let, for buildings to house a battalion of infantry at Camp Mc-It was established that the complainant's former wife was making $25 a week and her husband twice that Rockwell Field, Coronado, California, are next on the Many people besides General Summerall have had The former wife, however, was obdurate, and insisted a part in bringing about these improvement, but the chief of staff has the satisfaction of seeing a change from conditions which he once, though only once, pub-

Another Record/

500,000 New Six Cylinder HEVROLETS since Jan.1st

Sweeping constantly ahead to greater and greater heights of popularity . . . making and breaking new records of success with impressive regularity... the new Chevrolet Six has established one of the most remarkable records in automotive history—more than 500,000 on the road since January 1st!

Not only does this brilliant accomplishment surpass the greatest record that Chevrolet has ever achieved in the past—but it brings to Chevrolet the significant honor of having built in only four months a greater number of six-cylinder cars than any other manufacturer has ever produced in an entire year!

Even with such a record to focus attention upon the outstanding value of the Chevrolet Six—many people still do not appreciate what "a Six in the price range of the four" actually means!

To such persons, consideration of the features responsible for this tremendous popularity will prove a revelation. So read the adjoining column carefully -and then come in and ask for a ride in this sensational six-cylinder car.

The ROADSTER	The COACH	The Convertible $725
The PHARTON 525	FOF	The Sedan Delivery $595

COMPARE the delivered price as well as the list price in considering automobile values. Chevrolet's delivered prices include only reasonable charges for delivery and financing.

Outstanding Features of the New Chevrolet Six that have created this Tremendous Popularity ~

6-Cylinder Smoothness

Due to the finer inherent balance of its six-cylinder motor-the new Chevrolet Six provides that smooth, quiet, flexible performance which is characteristic of the truly fine automobile. At every speed, the power is delivered easily, freely and without annoying vibration,

6-Cylinder Getaway

In sheer brilliance of performance, as well as in smoothness and quietness of operation, the new Chevrolet Six is a revelation. Acceleration is remarkably fast. And a new non-detonating cylinder head eliminates every trace of "lugging.".

6-Cylinder Speed

The new Chevrolet Six has speed in abundance—but even more important than its speed is the smooth, quiet, restful comfort you experience at every point on the speedometer. You can open the throttle wide with a feeling of complete security.

Better Than 20 Miles Per Gallon

The marvelous performance of the Chevrolet Six would be exceptional in any car. But in the new Chevrolet Six it is actually sensational—for here it is combined with an economy of better than 20 miles to the gallon of gasoline!

Exceptional Riding Comfort

Another vital factor that has influenced over a halfmillion people in their selection of the new Chevrolet Six is its marvelous riding comfort. It travels smoothly over rough roads — and its balance on turns and corners is exceptional.

Beautiful Fisher Bodies

Longer, lower and roomier-finished in attractive. long-lasting colors—and upholstered in rich, deeptufted fabrics—the new Fisher bodies on the Chevrolet Six introduce into the low-price field an entirely new measure of style and distinction.

Proved Dependability

Tested for more than a million miles on the roads of the General Motors Proving Ground—the new Chevrolet Six went into the hands of its owners thoroughly proved in every detail. And now reports of its performance on the highways of the nation pay glowing tribute to its endurance and dependability.

Amazing Low Prices

An achievement that surpasses even the brilliant performance qualities of this sensational six-cylinder car are the prices at which it is offered. Study these prices, and compare them with any other car and you will recognize the remarkable value represented in this Six in the price range of the four!

AN IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT

It is with pleasure that we announce our appointment as exclusive teachers of the famous Rankin System of Flying Instruction in this city. This is the famous method which is turning out more finished pilots than any other system of instruction in the country. Perfected at the Rankin School of Flying in Portland, Oregon, the pilot's course is internationally recognized as the one finished method of flying instruction. It offers you the advantages of the combined experiences of men who have been in the business of flying and teaching others how since the early days of aviation history. A unique feature of the Rankin System of Flying Instruction is that flying is taught without danger. Thousands upon thousands of flights have been made without a single serious accident and with but one slight minor injury to anyone-student, graduate, pilot or passenger.

The demand for Rankin students is far in excess of the supply.

England's Chance To Reclaim Golf Glory Comes At Muirfield

Open Title At Stake

Seven of Last Eight Have Been Won by

By Davis J. Walsh. EW YORK, May 4. — England's great chance to reclaim at least in part "the glory that was Rome's" will come to it on the wind-whipped dunes of Muirfield next week, with the holding of the annual British open golf championship. This once was an institution as Anglican as the bank of England and, up to 1921, the hand of no infidel as much as caressed a handle of the champion-

So much for British tradition. It runs for Mrs. Sweeney's husband to-day. Seven of the last eight open titles have been won by Americans five of these victories, from 1924 to the present, have been successive and altogether the American triumph in England, once a hat-throwing episide, is now a bromide. I think the smug omplacence of American golf is in for a jolt next week.

We have mustered the man-power of our professional golf at Muirfield, probably the strongest team America has sponsored. But golf is the great lottery of sport. We have drawn the winning number in 1921, 1922, 1924, 1925, 1926, 1927 and 1928, partly because we were lucky and mostly because we were too good. But the must synchronize with luck and I can't see how we can expect the com-

Story of Adventurous Youth, Mystery, Fortune and a Girl.

"What's that?" asked Viola in great alarm.

"The inability to distinguish colors. He insists black eyes are hazel and that black hair is brown. I don't know what to make of it."

Viola gave him a blank look. Then her lips twitched. Her soft hazel eyes danced slyly. Better go and have your luncheon, Dr. Speck," she suggested. "I'll stay here."

The physician walked out, shaking his red head. Viola sat down, looking as if something had struck her very humorously. The patient opened his eyes. A smile drifted across his pale face.

Funny man, that doctor," he remarked, reaching out and stroking a head of lustrous brown hair. "He's plumb color blind."

Viola raised his head and turned the pillow. For a time neither spoke. Hannan lay in a state of drowsy content "Is the shoulder still palning?" Viola asked.

"Not a bit," Hannan Hed. Then his face darkened.
"Poor Curry! He was a loyal friend, Viola—the best 'Yes, but you mustn't think about such things for the

"I-I'm not sure. Once I thought I did, but I was too excited to pay attention. Now that I think back, it seems some one passed me in the hall." "The murderer," said Hannan grimly. happened?

"I found a match and then I saw the-the body. You were lying close by, unconscious. I think I must have screamed, for the others came running down the hall.'
Hannan fixed a scowling look on the ceiling. "I'l never forgive myself for letting the murderer get away.

"But you couldn't help it. I'm sure you did the best you could. And you mustn't excite yourself. Let's try to think of something pleasant." "I'll have a million pleasant things to say to you later.

Now I want to talk about the thirty that are on my mind. It's queer about Curry, First he disappeared—dropped out of sight His wooden cigar was found in the little hall that leads to the iron door. Then, last night, some one murdered him in that room on the second floor. Who could have done it, and why? I can't get the hang of it." get the hang of it."

"I wonder," said Viola thoughtfully, "what happened in the hall when Mr. Curry dropped his cigar." "Whatever it was, it's curious it should happen in that particular place, right in front of the iron door. That suggests a lot of things, doesn't it?"
"But nothing that's very clear."
"No, it's all muddled. It looks to me though, as if some one must have attacked Curry in that hall-struck him unconscious, maybe, and then carried him to the upstairs room and kept him there until last night. But why should anybody do a thing like that?"

Viola shook her brown head and sighed.
"It would all have been cleared up quickly enough
if I hadn't let the murderer get away last night," said
Hannan frefully. "Well, I'll get him yet. I only wish," he added dolefully, "that I had got a good look at him. As it was I didn't even get a glimpse of his face. All I saw was his foot."

"His foot?" Viola echoed bewilderedly.

"Yes. You see, he kicked out from behind me all of a sudden and snuffed out the candle. That's when I

"What kind of foot was it?"
"Oh, just an ordinary foot. I don't remember anything about it. It happened so quickly."

"Of course. But you must have heard his footsteps as he came up behind you."
"I did, but I didn't take warning quickly enough. I was thinking of nothing but Curry."

'What did the footsteps sound like?" Hannan stared at her. "Why, there was nothing remarkable about them. They were just-" He paused

His eyes narrowed. The dread scene in the dim room flashed through his mind again, a picture of darkness and evil. Minor de

'Yes?" Viola smiled encouragingly. "By Jove!" said Hannan. "There was something peculiar about those footsteps, now I come to think of it. The fellow's shoes creaked a little. But that," with a

"doesn't mean much." "It does," Viola declared. "It means a whole lot These days shoes are made so they won't creak. There are very few that do.'

Hannan raised his head and rested it against his elbow. His pale face was all alertness. "You take the prize, Viola," he declared. "I would never have thought of that. It's a clue! Now, all we have to do is to keep our ears open for a pair of creaking shoes."

Viola nodded. "There isn't apt to be more than one creaky pair in this house." "And the murderer is still here," said Hannan with enthusiasm. "He can't have left the house. That's one good thing the avalanche did." 'Maybe it isn't the only one," suggested Viola vague Hannan smiled faintly. "Those big hazel eyes of yours look very wise, Viola. I wish I could have a peep into your brain. I believe you are one of those deep persons who think a lot and say little.

"Oh, no. I'm not a bit deep. Somethimes, though, I have certain curious feelings about persons and things. I may tell you about them some day. You see"—she paused while Old Winthrop's clock outside in the hall struck 2- "I am not what you think I am. Neither am I what John Breck thinks I am. He has made up his mind I am a lady detective just because I made one or two deductions from the footprints you left the night you came here. It may be that the detective instinct runs in our family. My brother is a detective. Once he demonstrated to me how pickpockets work. It was awfully fascinating I believe that with a few lessons I might have become an expert.

"I am sure of it. That time in the taxi-" "Oh, that wasn't a real test of my talent as a pickpocket. I was just lucky. The collision helped a lot. But even so I made a mess of it. You were too clever for me, Hannan Martenet."

They laughed over the recollection Hannan glanced toward the door. A sound like that of a chair being moved sounded on the other side.

"That's John Breck," Viola explained "I asked him to keep watch outside your door until you are well. At night he will move his bed up against the door so nobody can pass without his knowing it.' Hannan stared at her.

"You see," she elucidated, "I'll feel safer about you with John keeping watch. After what happened last night-" he paused, her face darkening.

"Well," said Hannan, "that's thrilling. It's my first experience with a bodyguard. I'm sure John will make thorough job of it. Did he seem surprised to learn that I was in the house?"

'Not very. The poor man has had so many surprise: that he is beginning to take things for granted. But everybody else was startled, except Mr. Mallingham and Mr. Peters-and even they tried to pretend it was a surprise. Your mother-Mrs. Martenet, I mean-seemed absolutely stunned."

Hannan laughed softly; then his face sobered. "1 seem to forget everything that's unpleasant when I am with you—the things that happened last night and the that may happen next. How do the others feel about the—er—general situation?"

Viola's little chin drooped. "It's a gloomy crowd, Hannan, and they look all the gloomier when they pretend to be cheerful." "Don't they think there is any hope?"

"Oh, they are pretending, but I believe every one is convinced there is no chance of escape. They are all trying to resign themselves to the worst. There seems to be only one hope—that somebody may chance to come this way and discover our predicament-and that isn't very likely."

THE law goes north of 53 in this I intriguing novel of the Royal Northwest Mounted Police.

Old Angus McLeod declared that he didn't kill John Holt, and Constable Kinkaid of the Mounted believed him. But McLeod's fingerprints were on the fatal ax and Kinkaid took him to the jail in Winnipeg.

It was a wild time up in the Churchill River country, for Holt had just struck it rich and the fury of an old-time gold rush was on. Mary McLeod listened to the gunmen and she hated the man who arrested her father.

But Constable Kinkaid was not the man to follow a false trail as you will see from this thrilling tale of gold, murder and the Mounted.

This Ohio feature story is told in the Sunday Plain Dealer. Slaves of Women

Instead of the old phrase, "a woman's place is in the home," there is coming into use a new one, "a man's place is in his office," this writer says. Women are dominating in culture and learning, he explains.
